

Your big truck doesn't give you the right-of-way!

Public roadways are for the use of all members of the public. Just because your vehicle may be bigger than others doesn't mean you automatically have the right-of-way. Respect for other vehicles is a requirement for all drivers, although sometimes it seems that some people think their vehicle is more important than yours.

Yield to people who get to the intersection first. Always watch out for the unexpected driving habits of others. Always use caution when rounding a corner where pedestrians are present. Obey signs that give pedestrians the right-of-way in crosswalks.

A courteous, focused professional driver respects others sharing the road.
